TREASURER REPORTS ON COUNTY FINANCE

MONTHLY STATEMENT TO THE SUPERVISORS SHOWS GOOD CONDITIONS

That the county finances are in excellent condition was evidenced by Treasurer Johnson's monthly report to the supervisors the first of the week.

The balance on hand Nov. 1st was $133,540.30. Receipts for the month of November amounted to $133,344.86, while disbursements for the same period were $53,506.54, leaving a balance Dec. 6th of $213,378.62.

The following sums were received from the various officials: Clerk, $240.25; recorder, 425.85; sheriff, $63.54; Judge Furniss, $3; Judge Crockett, $24; J. Liftchild (county farm), $178.96; Judge Walker, $4.30; Judge Kilbourne, $2.50; Judge Brown, $1.75; Judge Clendenin, $2; Judge Young, $21.25; Judge Wallace, $38.

CONCERTS TO BE PUT ON AT VICTORY THEATRE

Beginning Friday, December 17th, Ukiah musicians will put on a series of concerts at the Victory theatre, provided patrons of the theatre take kindly to them. The program will be rendered between the two shows given by Mr. Cox, proprietor of the theatre. The program next Friday evening will include two songs, as well as numerous instrumental offerings. The concerts will be under the direction of G. A. Keller.

WATER CASE TO GO TO HIGHER COURT

The case of Grace Hudson vs. the Ukiah Water and Improvement Co. will be appealed to a higher court, preliminary papers in the appeal being filed with the county clerk this week. The superior court held that the free right of the plaintiff to all the water she could use through a half-inch pipe from the mains of the company was legal. The allowance was made many years ago by the predecessors of the present company, and when the latter took over the old company the privilege was held by Mrs. Hudson to still be legal. The opinion of the superior court was in her favor.

Recently the water company demanded payment for the water and stopped the service and Mrs. Hudson sued.

MARRIAGE LICENSES

A marriage license was issued this week to Malcolm McDonald, of Occidental, Sonoma county, and Flora Margaret Murchison, of Oakland.

SALE ON EXECUTION RESULTS IN TANGLE

Ira Thompson, of Westport, this week, through Preston & Preston, filed a suit against Sheriff R. R. Byrnes et al, seeking to clear up a legal tangle which has arisen over the sale on execution of the property of the Sexton Lumber company, which has been doing business in the vicinity of Westport, and which recently went on the rocks.

Thompson filed a lien against the company when it first broke up and obtained a judgment. The property was advertised for sale duly by the sheriff and on the date advertised was sold to Thompson by Bert Johnson, of Fort Bragg, acting for the sheriff. Johnson was one of Byrnes' deputies during his first term of office but when the latter was reelected he failed to reappoint Johnson as deputy or to require a bond, so, fearing that the sale might be illegal on that account, he readvertised it and it was sold a second time by Deputy Sheriff Clarence Ganter. At the second sale it was bid in by Chas. McFaul, who paid $100 down on the sale, but who subsequently failed to pay the balance. The present suit is brought by Thompson to have the first sale declared a valid one by the court and to clear title to the property.

The point as to whether Johnson was a deputy of Byrnes' by reason of his appointment during Byrnes' first term is the one which is to be settled.

WILLITS FACES SUIT FOR $600 ROYALTIES

Willits, December 8—Willits is facing a suit for damages. Several years ago we put in a sewer system and now the Cameron Septic Tank Co. have presented a bill for a royalty which amounts to nearly $600. Mannon & Mannon of Ukiah represent the Cameron Septic Tank Co. No action has yet been taken on the claim for damages as the city attorney wants to make a thorough investigation first.

JAS. H. BROWN DEAD

James Henry Brown, a native of Ohio, died at his home on the Tomki, December 2nd, aged 74 years. He leaves two children, James H. Brown, Jr., and Mrs. J. Irving Read, both of whom live near Willits. The remains were shipped to Oakland for burial.

MANY TAX REBATES ALLOWED BY SUPERVISORS

LUMBER COMPANIES AND MANY OTHERS PAID TAXES ON GOVT. LAND

A large number of tax rebates were allowed by the supervisors this month as will be seen in the list of bills allowed on page two of this issue of the Dispatch.

For the enlightenment of the public we will state that these rebates for the most part are for taxes paid on lands which are the property of the United States. It seems that some years ago the state selected a large acreage of school lands, but selected more than the government allowed. This land was subsequently taken by various parties on scrip and for many years they paid taxes on it. It was finally discovered that it had never been deeded to the state by the government and that the titles of those holding it were void. Therefore they have filed application for their tax rebates.

The matter of whether the lands affected shall be finally deeded to the state remains unsettled at Washington. A large acreage is redwood timber land to which the Bolton interests, the L. E. White Lumber company, the Caspar Lumber company and various other coast companies, as well as many private parties believed they had full title.

SCHOOL FAIR CLEARS FIVE HUNDRED DOLLARS

PROCEEDS TO GO FOR IMPROVEMENTS AT UKIAH GRAMMAR SCHOOL

The school fair committee of the Parent-Teachers' Association of the grammar school submits the following report to the public. The receipts, expenditures, and amount cleared for the two evenings and one afternoon are as follows:

Candy Booth	$ 23.63
Coffee	34.70
Cap and Apron	61.70
Delicatessen	35.05
Fancy Work	127.00
Fruit and Flowers	27.85
Ice Cream	34.00
Pop Corn	22.05
Santa Claus	52.17
Tea and Confetti	23.10
Door Receipts	63.75
	505.00
Expenditures	5.00
Amount Cleared	$500.00

The town is to be congratulated upon this fine showing. Never has there been more splendid public spirit and disinterested generosity shown than on this occasion. It would take too much space to name indididually everyone who contributed to the success of this fair. In a general way, we may say that beside the ten groups of women who worked untiringly for the booths and those who generously helped with the program and the decorations, are the many store-keepers who provided various necessary articles, the newspaper men who willingly published the announcements, the carpenters, mill-men, and hop-festival committee who furnished labor and material, and the hosts who made donations and patronized the booths. Miss Luella Williams most kindly lent her piano for the occasion, the Anker Draying Co. hauled all supplies, etc., gratis, and Dr. Cleland gave the use of the hall for the week. It speaks well for the citizens of this town that the school children and the schools are dear to their hearts.

Efforts will be made at once to get out plans for the sheds. There are to be two sheds—one for the grammar school and one, either a shed or a covered porch for the primary. If the above amount prove insufficient for this purpose, other means will be found to make up what is required. The Parent-Teachers' Association has undertaken this for their year's work. A splendid beginning has been made and they feel sure that the public will bring to a successful finish what has been so satisfactorily begun.

ELKS HOLD FORTH IN GRAND STYLE

LOCAL PADDOCK ACT AS HOSTS TO LARGE CROWD YESTERDAY EVENING

The Ukiah Elks did themselves proud last night, when their long heralded dance was held at the Odd Fellows' hall. Several of the Bills from other parts were here to aid in the good time and the bulls of the local paddock were there a million. Each local Elk had the privilege of inviting a friend and lady, and as all availed themselves of the privilege, a congenial crowd, just large enough, was in evidence.

The evening's program consisted of dancing and cards, and in addition, entertainers from Santa Rosa and the city were here to lend variety and interest to the affair. The hall was prettily decorated and the lunch was calculated to do the greatest good to the greatest number.

Many elegant gowns were in evidence, for Ukiah's fair ones will take second place to none when it comes to a matter of beautiful clothes. The function was carried out in a manner eminently befitting the great order under the auspices of which it was given, and local Elks may well be proud of its success.

Chas. Blalack was in town from his Largo ranch yesterday.

ATTEMPT TO QUASH APPEAL IN SCHMITT-REDEMEYER CASE

The superior court was occupied last Monday with the case of Schmitt vs. Redemeyer. The case, a damage suit, was tried several months ago and Judge White sustained the motion of Attorney Robert Duncan for a non-suit. Attorneys Preston & Preston for Schmitt moved for a new trial and the motion was denied. They then gave notice of an appeal from the order denying the new trial.

Recently the bill of exceptions was filed preliminary to the appeal, but Attorney Robt. Duncan holds that the period of time allowed by law for such filing has elapsed and is trying to quash the proceedings on that ground. The argument against the appeal will proceed next Monday, Judge White in the meantime examining the briefs of both contestants.

DEATH OF DAVID McKEE

David McKee, an old resident of Potter valley, died last Wednesday evening at the state hospital at Talmage. The remains were taken to Potter valley yesterday for burial by Ed Eversole and the funeral was held there.

The deceased was 74 years of age and leaves several children.

Frank Marble departed this week for Lake county and from there contemplates a trip to other parts. He will not return to Ukiah for some months and may decide to locate elsewhere permanently.

It was then moved, seconded and carried unanimously that L. P. Anker be appointed to fill the unexpired term of T. L. Carothers, until the city election next April.

All vehicles must keep to the right on the streets and in turning corners. No vehicle shall be left standing on the streets at night without a white light in front and a red light behind.

A maximum fine of $300 or a jail sentence of three months or both fine and jail sentence are fixed as the penalty for infraction of the ordinance.

An ordinance was introduced by Trustee Lambert regulating the planting and maintenance of ornamental and shade trees along the sidewalks. The ordinance will provide for a certain height to which overhanging branches shall be trimmed, and for the planting of all trees within two feet of the curb line, between the curb line and the property line. A maximum fine of $50 is provided for infringements. The marshall shall have authority to remove or trim any tree to comply with the ordinance if the owner of the property refuses to do so after written notice. The cost of such action by the marshall shall be paid by the property owner.

Both these ordinances will be acted on at the next meeting of the board.

Trustees Charlton, Brown, Anker and Lambert were appointed a committee with full power to act to ascertain the proper trees for planting at the park.

The matter of regulating electrical connections was referred to the electric light committee and the electrician's office.

BUY MEAL TICKETS

The State Commission of Immigration and Housing has caused a warning to be published in the papers of the East to the effect that an acute condition of unemployment may develop in California during the early winter. The commission now states that this is a warning not only to the migratory workers of other states, but it is hoped to influence those in California to husband their summer's earnings. The commission urges that the surplus earnings be deposited in savings banks or other safe depositories. "Buy a meal ticket" is also a slogan proposed for the workers. The commission suggests that such an investment of savings in advance payments of room rent and meal tickets would in many instances prove a wise precaution and would help to tide an unemployed man through the winter months.

Year after year the opportunities for earning a living in times of stress in the winter, are growing more rare for the improvident and dissolute, who contribute not only to their own discomfort but to the hardships of the worthy unfortunates who are too often adjudged to be in the same improvident class.

P. P. Eckhart, of Largo, was in Ukiah last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Fish, of Potter valley, were Ukiah visitors Sunday.

UKIAH HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

(Ross Ryder, Correspondent)

To-morrow evening our champion basket ball team will mix matters with the team of the Santa Rosa high. Nearly every fan in this section knows that Santa Rosa has always put out a strong team in nearly everything that she undertakes, but very rarely has she ever put out one sufficiently strong to drive the boys of the purple and gold down to defeat. Manager Toles received a letter from the manager of the Santa Rosa team last Monday. This letter contained the conditions by which, if fulfilled, the Santa Rosa team would deign to come up here and let us play her. The conditions in the letter were rather restricting and sounded for all the world like the bunch of "do's and don't's" posted up in plain view on our county hospital. If we are to play the Rosy city boys we must let them choose the referee; must not work any new material gained from other schools this year, and numerous other restricting clauses. Nevertheless we feel that Santa Rosa must have lost some of the confidence that she had of yore, or she would not fear to play us at any cost. Therefore we are willing to accept her terms and will boost our team on to victory next Saturday evening. A preliminary game will be played between the Senior "scrubs" and the freshmen. The Senior team will consist of some of the senior boys who played basket ball in grammar school and in their freshmen year, but have not lately handled the ball. Nevertheless they feel confident that they can give the "Fresh" team a run for their money. It would be in keeping with the Yuletide spirit for a large crowd to come out. We promise the town people to show a great deal of enthusiasm which they said was lacking during the last game. We have been learning some new songs and yells and will deliver these to-morrow evening in hopes that we can cheer our boys some by our efforts.

Mr. Schoer returned Sunday evening from his trip to the exposition, and seems to have had a very fine time. He says that he was in the largest crowd that he was ever in, on the closing day of the fair.

Our new talking machine, which, through the kind efforts of the civic section of the Saturday Afternoon Club, has become one of the regular equipments in our school was sampled last Tuesday afternoon. Several pieces were played upon it and all are now loud in their praise of the machine and its tone, and in their thanks to the progressive ladies of the town for what they did toward getting it. It was moved and seconded that we should instruct the secretary of the student body to write an expression of thanks to the civic section of the Saturday Afternoon Club in order that they might see that their gift had been appreciated. Yet there are more ways than one that we may show our appreciation to the kind townspeople for what they do for us. Mr. Schoer gave special instructions as to the use of the phonograph, saying that it was to be used for instruction and not as a plaything.

On the opening night of the grammar school fair held last week our singing class, led by Miss Haile, its teacher, rendered two very beautiful and well prepared selections as part of the program for the evening. It is a noteworthy fact that the music class had made such a success in its first six months. There are something over thirty pupils in the class, all of which are rapidly developing good voices, or improving those with which they were gifted.

Examinations for the last month commenced yesterday and will continue until next Tuesday. On Wednesday the report cards for the month will be given out and will necessarily be returned before Friday evening. We have a very systematic way of going through our examinations this year, thus avoiding the confusion and worry usually so characteristic of unexpected ex's. On Thursday the classes which recite the first period in the morning and the first in the afternoon were examined. On Monday the third classes in the morning and the last or third in the afternoon will be examined, and on Tuesday any extra examinations will be held.

The Junior English class have taken up "Webster's Reply to Hayne," and though it is rather difficult to fathom at first, is making very good progress in the intricacies of the great debate.

The fourth period was ommitted last Friday and the Reverend Hjalmer Berg of the Christian church addressed us on the "Keywords of Success." Mr. Berg's talk was highly instructive and mayhap will inspire higher ideals in some boy or girl.

The monthly meeting of the Parent-Teachers' Association will be held this evening in the Baptist church at seven thirty. A very good program has been prepared and will consist of the following: Remarks by president, recitation by Miss Aldrich, song by ladies double quartet, discussion on young children, the young people in the home, by Rev. Berg; the young people in the Sunday school, by Miss Puett; the young people in the kindergarten, by Mrs. Roderick; the young people at play, by C. Schoer, Jr.; recitation, by Grace Reed; God Bless Our Schools, An Old Man's Heaven, solo by Dr. Thomas.

The last lyceum program before the Christmas vacation will be put on next Friday afternoon at one o'clock. Owing to our scarcity of room the exercises will be held in the Christian church.

A new telephone was installed in the high school last Tuesday afternoon. The principal, Mr. Schoer, is in his office each morning until 9:45, at the noon hour, and after 2:30. The people at large are kindly requested to observe these hours. At no time will students be called from their classes, nor will students at school be allowed the use of the phone except on important business. Some six or seven years ago there was a phone here, but owing to the fact that so many of the fair sex spent study periods and the noon hours talking to their swains, the phone was removed. But this time the telephone proposition will be attended to in a strict business method and none of the above rules will be broken.

Miss Place left hurriedly for the city last Wednesday morning because of the serious illness of her mother. During her absence her work is being carried on by Mr. Schoer and Miss Tibbets.

The first issue of the "Snort" went to press Wednesday morning. The question has been asked "What is the politics of the "Snort," and what are the highest aspirations of the editor?" Mr. Scott asked me to announce that the paper is strictly democratical and will support and adhere to any one belonging to that party. This is the eighth consecutive year which the "Snort" has been produced, it being started by Laurie Layman seven years ago, and has continued to be read even unto this day. Last year Mr. Scott took up the work so ably begun by Laurie and carried the Snort to a great financial success. As a result Mr. Scott figures that he can clear something on it this year. Although there are no hard feeling between the editor and the members of the Press Association, it is rumored about that the paper was again resumed to pay off an old grudge which the members of the association seemed to have incurred by their numerous attempts to boost Scottie into the position of champion queener of the high school. It is reported that Scottie has obtained some new and startling ideas from the school papers and pupils of Freemont high with which he has become so familiar.

Mr. Schoer will file all the examination papers for this month in his office. Mr. Schoer already has the papers of one month filed in his office, and will continue to take papers throughout the year, in order that he may see just how each one of us is progressing in spelling, neatness, capitalization and punctuation.

Miss Miriam Broaddus is back again in school after an enforced vacation on account of illness.

Registration blanks for the registering of our track team in the N. W. S. L. were received last Wednesday.

Miss Tibbets, who is directing the farce "Disappointed Santa Claus", announces that the cast bids fair to rival that which put on the senior play last Thanksgiving.

Book reviews are due this afternoon. Miss Tibbets reports that so far this year the books seem to have been thoroughly digested by their readers before the day for the book review and consequently a very good list of stories have been turned in.

Miss Haile tried out the third year algebra class on a first year examination last Wednesday. For the most part the papers were very good and a few of the class succeeded in drawing perfect papers. Nevertheless, some of the students showed that they had forgotten too much of the work which they had accomplished in the year of their debut into high school.

The attendance at high school during the past week has been almost perfect, that is, the usual run of absentees has not commenced or else they are looking forward to the two weeks' vacation beginning on the seventeenth of the month.

Miss Bunny Cleland has been showing a great deal of partisanship lately. During the last basketball game with the town team she had three fights with her dearest schoolmate, who accused Referee Van Dyke of giving the high school a rotten deal. It shows very plainly with whom the sympathies of Miss Cleland reside, and that she thought more of the honor of a man than the honor of the school.

GIBRALTAR.

The Rock That Guards the Mouth of the Mediterranean.

Gibraltar was captured by the British July 24, 1704, and from that day has not been out of British hands.

At first little was thought of the importance of this stronghold. For the succeeding nine years the Spaniards made repeated attempts to recapture it. On one occasion they nearly succeeded.

A French and Spanish force having been collected on the isthmus that joins the rock to the mainland, a goatherd offered to show them a path up the sloping sides of the rock, which he had reason to believe was unknown to the British. This offer was accepted.

Five hundred troops ascended quietly one night and took shelter in a hollow called by the Spaniards "the little chair." At daybreak next morning they ascended higher, took the signal station, killed the guard and anxiously looked for expected re-enforcements. The re-enforcements failed to arrive. The armed garrison sallied out and drove the invaders down the rock. The "little chair" was filled up and the place made stronger than ever.

All subsequent attempts to capture the rock have failed. One of them was a siege by Spain and France, beginning in 1779 and not terminating until September, 1783.

The rock of Gibraltar takes on a more important bearing than ever in these days of big guns because of its commanding position at the mouth of the Mediterranean, where that sea is little more than twenty miles wide.—Exchange.

LITTLE ANDORRA.

The Tiny Republic That Nestles in a Nook in the Pyrenees.

Andorra is a republic of 175 square miles situated in the valley of the same name in the Eastern Pyrenees. It forms an irregular little square plug between France and Spain and is a hotbed for smugglers plying between the two countries. It leads a semi-independent existence under the protection of France and the Bishop of Urgel, Spain. Charlemagne declared it independent in return for its services against the Moors.

In 1278 it was transferred to the Comte de Foix and the Bishopric of Urgel. During the French revolution relations between it and France were interrupted, on account of the refusal of France to accept the annual tribute, which was considered incompatible with a Republican form of government. In 1806, however, the former relations were renewed, and free importation of cereals, made necessary by the limited area of Andorra, was allowed by France in return for an annual tribute of 960 francs.

Andorra is governed by a council of twenty-four members chosen for four years by the heads of the communities. The revenue is derived from lands and a few taxes. The manner of life is very simple. Every ablebodied male is liable to military service between the ages of sixteen and sixty. The capital is Andorra, with about 1,000 inhabitants. The total population is about 6,000 and remains practically stationary.

Expecting Another Drop.

Some time ago Mrs. Green called on her friend, Mrs. White, and, after clutching, kissing and saying how dreadfully delighted they were to see each other, they turned to the interesting topics of the day.

"By the way," said Mrs. Green after a time, "I haven't heard anything about Eva's divorce lately. I wonder what has become of it?"

"I heard a few days ago that she had dropped all proceedings," answered Mrs. White.

"Dropped all proceedings!" was the wondering rejoinder of Mrs. Green. "You don't really mean it?"

"Yes," returned Mrs. White. "Her husband has taken to aeroplaning, and she has decided to let the thing adjust itself."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

Futility of Argument.

Plato defined man as "a two legged animal without feathers." Diogenes, who heard this, plucked a cock. "This is Plato's man," said he. But never you think the old timer lacked a "comeback." He added to his original definition the words, "With broad flat nails." Such is the futility of argument.—Springfield Republican.

His Favorite Play.

Edith—That Mr. Phun is conversationally impossible. Ethel—Why so? Edith—We were talking about the theatre, and when I inquired what was his favorite play he said if he had any favorite it was seeing a man steal second.—Boston Transcript.

Made from the right crude

The Jury of Awards at both San Francisco and San Diego Expositions found an oil made from California asphalt-base crude, highest in lubricating efficiency. That oil was Zerolene. The fact, too, that such unbiased authorities as a U. S. Naval Engineer, engineers of the Packard and Ford Motor Companies, and others, have also gone on record in favor of oils made from asphalt-base crude—in accord with the decision of the Exposition juries—proves that Zerolene is made of the right crude, and made right.

A year's subscription to the Dispatch would make an ideal Christmas present in many cases. 8-3t

Mrs. Lamb was reported seriously ill at her home on North State street yesterday.

Did it ever occur to you that a year's subscription to the Dispatch would make one of the most acceptable Christmas presents you could give, especially if the party is a former resident living now in some other place? They would be glad to see the home news. Only $2.50 a year. $1.25 for six months. 8-3t

W. W. Moody, a resident of this place, and an old employee of the Standard Oil Company in San Francisco, has been appointed to take charge of the interests of the Standard Oil Company in Willits, and has already moved to that place and is now in charge of the office. At one time Moody had charge of the sales division of the Standard Company, but resigned his position because of the confinement and then he and Mrs. Moody moved to Ukiah where they have a host of friends. As soon as Mr. Moody gets settled in his work Mrs. Moody will also move to Willits.

CEMETERY CASE IS SUBMITTED ON BRIEFS

The case of Tarwater et al vs. Babcock was on in the superior court this week and has been ordered submitted on briefs. The case arose over the ownership of a plot of ground used as a cemetery near Boonville. Babcock bought a certain tract of land several years ago from Thos. Rawles on which was a small cemetery. A few months ago a deed was filed purporting to be from the former owner of the land in favor of Tarwater et al as trustees of the cemetery, and which seemed to indicate that a greater tract was included originally in the cemetery than was enclosed by the fence which stood around it at the time Babcock bought the land. Babcock claims that he had no knowledge that any such deed was in existence and that he himself has been selling plots adjacent to the original cemetery for burial purposes and that before the suit was instituted he had no idea that any one else claimed any title to any of the land he had bought.

GRAND JURY MEETS

The grand jury met yesterday for a few hours and adjourned until today. Rumors of several criminal cases under investigation were rife yesterday, and it is expected that several indictments will be returned.

ELKS PLACED ON EDEN VALLEY RANCH

HERD OF SEVENTEEN IS NOW LOCATED IN MENDOCINO COUNTY

Willits, Dec. 8—Last Saturday a carload of elks was brought here from the Miller & Lux ranch in Kern county. The animals were consigned to the Eden valley ranch and it took six four-horse wagons to haul them out. There were eleven does and one buck in the shipment, and these added to the five they already had will make quite a herd. About 400 acres have been fenced off for the wild animals and they are allowed to run in a state of nature. Besides the elks they have one buffalo.

DADDY BILL WALLACE CALLS THE TURN

Lloyd Wallace was made a happy papa this week, word being received by telegram yesterday, the 9th, of the birth of a son to Mrs. Wallace in Eureka that morning. Mother and son were reported doing nicely. "Bill" had a name already picked out for the youngster, who, he said, was going to be called Young Bill Wallace. Sometimes a name picked out beforehand fails to fit on account of the sex of the offspring, but Lloyd seems to have called the turn in this case.

The youngster has been named William Ford Wallace.

CLAUDE WHITE KICKED IN LEG BY HORSE

Claude White was kicked by one of his horses the first of the week, the bone of one leg being shattered by the blow. Mrs. White took charge of the delivery business, driving the wagon for several days herself, until help could be obtained. Claude is getting along as well as could be expected, but his injury is a serious and painful one.

THE WEATHER

Dr. McCowen reports as follows for the weather the past week: Maximum temperature, 65, on the 9th; minimum, 38, on the 4th. Rainfall, 2.73 inches for the week, making 7.67 for the season, against 8.53 to date last season.

Mrs. Pink Burke and children came over from their ranch near Boonville and spent a few days in town this week, returning Wednesday.

TREATMENT OF PEAR BLIGHT

All Wounds Made by Cutting Out Infected Parts Should Be Disinfected

In the management of the orchard, especially the apple and pear orchard, there is a period in the autumn after the fruit is gathered, and perhaps after other crops have been safely harvested, that is most convenient for doing some of the careful work in the control of certain diseases and pests. There are certain fungous and bacterial diseases, particularly pear blight and apple canker, which are best worked upon at this time. These diseases are principally controlled by the eradication methods rather than by spraying. With both these diseases it is not only a matter of convenience but it is a fortunate thing that some of the most important work of the season can be best accomplished at the time when it is most convenient. The mild autumn days before the disagreeable, rainy or cold weather comes give the very best opportunity for careful work and close inspection.

Pear Blight

Pear blight is a bacterial disease which works mostly in the fleshy, growing, tender parts of the tree, including the blossom clusters, young twigs, and the bark of larger branches, and even on the body, collar, and root system of the tree. Under certain conditions the bacteria spread into the wood to a considerable extent. The disease attacks the pear, apple, quince, and other related fruits of the pome family. While the leaves are attacked to some extent, particularly the leaf stems and midribs of the younger leaves, the main killing of the foliage results from the death of the twigs and branches on which the leaves are located. The dead branches and other parts give no evidence to the naked eye of the cause of their death and thus resemble somewhat limbs killed by fire; hence the name fire blight, particularly with blight on the apple, is often applied.

How the Tree is Infected

The germs get into the tree in several ways. First and most important is the blossom blight. Flies and other insects carry the germs from the gummy exudate on the holdover blight to the opening blossoms and infect the nectaries of the flower. Bees and other insects carry the germs from blossom to blossom and tree to tree and even to adjacent orchards and spread the disease rapidly during the blooming period. During the present season pear blight has been particularly bad, especially the blossom blight on both pears and apples. The outbreak of 1915 stands out as one of the worst in history, particularly on account of the unusual amount of blossom blight on the apple.

Next of importance after the blossom blight, and in some cases the most serious phase of the disease, is the infection of the tender tips of growing twigs. Thousands of these growing twigs may be killed on a single large apple or pear tree. The blight may extend from the infections on the blossoms or from the twigs down on to the larger branches, thence to the body of the tree. The branches, bodys, and more particularly the collar and even the root system of the tree, may be infected directly by the germs. The infection may come from a fruit spur, water sprout, or even a sprout from the root, or the germs may be introduced by punctures by insects, birds, implements, or other means, directly into the fleshy bark, or even may enter, in certain cases, through growth cracks. Ordinarily the cuticle of the tree protects it from the entrance of the germs, otherwise there would be much more destruction of trees than actually occurs.

Each infection, no matter where it occurs, should be looked upon as an individual case of pear blight. The diseases resulting from the various modes of attack for convenience are given various names, such as blossom blight, twig blight, body blight, collar blight and root blight. The lower down on a tree, as a rule, the more dangerous is the blight. The tree may have a thousand or more twigs and blossoms killed in the top and not be seriously or permanently injured, while a single case of body blight or collar blight may result in death. Each infection is to be looked upon as a definite, limited diseased area. The part attacked is usually destroyed, though the disease may occur in the outer fleshy bark of the limbs and branches without always penetrating to the cambium. When the cambium or vital layer between the wood and bark is killed, death of that particular area, of course results.

Secondary Control Measures

For various reasons spraying has not been practically successful in controlling the disease. The eradication method, or actually cutting out the diseased area, is the principal way of controlling pear blight. Other methods, such as withholding stable manure and nitrogenous fertilizers, moderate cultivation or withholding it completely, seeding the orchard down to grass or clover, or sowing rank-growing cover crops after the blight appears in the spring, such as cowpeas and sorghum in the Middle states, oats, millet or similar crops in the Northern states, all help in a secondary way in reducing the severity of the blight. In the irrigated orchards the use of the minimum amount of irrigation water is also advisable.

Direct Eradication

The main method of controlling pear blight, however, consists in cutting out the diseased tissues wherever found and disinfecting the wound and the instruments to avoid spreading the disease. In the great majority of cases fortunately the blight comes to a definite standstill in the bark, after killing a certain distance, and stops. The germs die out in the dead bark, a crack or crevice forms between the live and the dead bark, and the case ends itself naturally and heals out. In many cases, however, the disease, while dying out in the older parts, keeps on spreading on the margin, the germs renewing themselves by multiplication and infecting new areas of fresh bark. When they manage to live through the dry, hot summer weather and keep alive until autumn, when the leaves drop from the trees, they almost invariably live over winter, and though greatly checked by the cold weather of the winter, are not killed or apparently even injured by the cold. Such cases become holdover blight, and by this means the supply of germs is kept over in the orchard for the next season. The holdover blight cases may extend considerably and result in further damage to the tree by the extension of that particular area, but their worst feature comes from the fact that they supply the gummy exudate and the virus for new infections on the blossoms the following spring. When warmer weather comes in the spring and root pressure fills the tree with sap the hold-over cases start off vigorously and exude the gummy matter, especially in moist weather, literally teaming with the pear blight bacilli. Insects, mainly flies, carry this to the opening blossoms.

Cutting out pear blight, therefore, has a double purpose, first of stopping the blight and cleaning up the tree, and second of preventing the hold-over. Much good work on blight can be done in the summer time, but the final cleanup should occur in the fall. Summer cutting, beginning as soon as the blossom blight shows plainly and continuing until the fruit is about half grown, is helpful. The best time to do it is in periods of dry, sunny weather. On young trees it is often very important, particularly on young pear and apple trees, to head off the blight by cutting well below it as soon as it shows up in the spring and summer.

Examine Bark Thoroughly

In all blight cutting, either summer or winter, it is important to examine thoroughly by cutting off the bark around the lower edge of the infection to determine the lowest point at which any change of color, even a water-soaked or transparent condition, can be detected with the eye. Young or active blight on the lower margin is readily distinguished by its moist, gummy or sticky character and either water-soaked or usually reddish discoleration of the bark. This is in rather marked contrast with the dry, dead bark where the germs have died out. Having found the lowest margin of the disease, if it is on a limb the knife, pruning shears, or saw is used, cutting well below the infection. If the disease has stopped and the dry dead bark is sharply defined in contrast with the live portion, the cutting may be made quite close below the margin, or it may be made where any convenient branch emerges or where the limb leaves the main branch or the trunk. If the freshly blighted area is short and the blend is rather abrupt between the dead and the live portion, the cut may also be made rather close to the diseased area if required by the nature of the branch. Six inches may be sufficient in such cases, but the cut should always be made on to sound bark and wood. If the saw is used it is always desirable afterward to trim the edges of the bark and the surfaces of the saw cut on the wood with a sharp knife to see if the whole surface is normal. If a water-soaked appearance is found, even on the surface of the wood, this indicates that the germs have penetrated the woody vessels and a lower cut is necessary, repeating the same process.

If the disease has run into the bark of a larger branch or extended down onto the body, the bark should be thoroughly removed from this area, cutting an inch or so at the margin and 4 to 6 inches or even more at the bottom, according to the virulence of the case, as suggested for work on the branches.

A large-bladed pocket knife, a scraper, and a three-fourths inch carpenter's gouge, kept well sharpened, are useful in cutting out the bark on these areas. The same principles of looking for water-soaked areas in wood should be applied here, and the gouge, or perhaps the chisel, used to remove all suspicious wood and bark. The edges of the bark should be trimmed smoothly and neatly, so that they can be readily disinfected and healing of the wound can properly take place.

Use Disinfectants

In all cases of blight cutting described above, a disinfectant should be carried constantly by the worker and each pruning wound or scar should be thoroughly wiped and saturated with this disinfectant and the tools wiped and cleaned with disinfectant before going to the next case. Disinfection of the tools before they are used again on any other part of the tree is necessary to insure success, as infected tools may carry blight from diseased to healthy parts. Various disinfectants may be used. One of the most convenient is a water solution of corrosive sublimate (1-1,000). The tablets can be purchased at the drug store which will make this strength by adding one tablet to a pint of water. The solution should be kept in a bottle with a cork and the operator should carry a sponge or roll of soft cotton cloth saturated with the disinfectant and for wiping the wounds and implements. The most convenient way is to have a small kit or basket and carry all the tools, including the

ROOSEVELT FINDS US GUILTY

Roosevelt, prosecuting attorney at large—and jury at large—brings in another verdict against the country and the Wilson administration. He says the slaughter of the Armenians by the Turks is directly due to Germany and indirectly due to the "milk and water" policy of the United States. All that he says, and much more, in a long and vociferous letter to Samuel T. Dutton, secretary of the American Committee for Armenian and Syrian relief.

It is a Roosevelt letter—no doubt of that. Roosevelt wrote it. No other man in the United States, except Hearst, would sign his name to such a thoroughly asinine document. As for sympathy with the Armenians, he will have none of it unless it is accompanied by indignation, and the indignation must be accompanied by "deeds." And, of course, the "deeds" demanded by Roosevelt must be of a blood-spilling nature.

But how is this country indirectly responsible for the slaughter of Armenians by Turks? The explanation is perfectly simple—to Roosevelt. "If this people, through its government, had not shirked its duty in Mexico for the last five years, and if this people, through its government, had not shirked its duty in connection with the world war for the last sixteen months, we would now be able to take effective action on behalf of Armenia," says Roosevelt to Dutton. That is, the Turks would not have dared to massacre Armenians if America had declared war on Germany and Austria and Turkey, and had sent Roosevelt across the Atlantic to blot the armies of those countries.

There are some who wonder if Roosevelt's thinking apparatus is in good working order. Many suspect that it is not, and they have good reason for their suspicion.—S. F. Star.

AGED WOMAN KNOCKED SENSELESS

Willits, Dec. 8—Monday night Mrs. D. J. Brandt fell on the pavement and was knocked senseless for over a hour. She uses crutches and just as she started to cross the street some small boys came running up Wood alley, made a quick turn and knocked the crutch from under her. She fell over the curb and struck on the point of her chin on the pavement. She was carried to the Rex Drug store but the clerks could not revive her and Dr. Babcock was summoned. It was not until after she was taken home that she came to. It was quite a bad accident but it will not be serious.

GAMBREL-BLALACK CASE DISMISSED THIS WEEK

The case of Gambrel vs. Blalack, which aroused considerable interest in the superior court here, has been settled without further litigation and was dismissed from the calendar this week.

The action was brought originally by Mrs. Gambrel to prevent Blalack from building a dam across Russian river, which she alleged would damage her property by causing the river to back up and overflow it.

Blalack has agreed to remove the dam.

SANFORD SUSTAINED IN BAHN-WISS CASE

COMMON SENSE DECISION OF LAND REGISTER IS UPHELD

The San Francisco Land Office received a decision this week from the Commissioner of the General Land Office at Washington affirming the decision of Register J. B. Sanford in the hotly contested Bahn-Wiss case, the land in contest being located near Willits.

Frederick Bahn, Sr., received a patent for 160 acres of land from the government in July, 1883, paying for the same, and was in absolute possession and control of the land for a period of 30 years up to the time of his death in 1911, and since his death the land has been in the possession, occupancy and control of his son, the plaintiff, and his brothers and sisters. For 30 years the land was known to be Bahn's, during all of which time he cultivated, improved and fenced and payed the taxes on the same. No one ever attempted to claim it until May, 1914, when Wiss boldly entered the field of Bahn, and tore down the fences and built a cabin in Bahn's wheatfield. This he did without permission of Bahn. The fields were enclosed by Bahn and Wiss had to go through the enclosure of Bahn for 150 yards to get to the cabin he had forcibly erected therein.

The contest is all over the various surveys and just where on the surface of the earth the township line is located. Bahn claims it one place under one survey and Wiss claims it another under a different survey. If Wiss' contention be true, then Bahn loses 100 acres of his best land, 60 acres of which is enclosed and under cultivation.

This is the famous case in which Register Sanford wrote six different decisions, alternately upholding each side according to the authorities quoted by the lawyers in the case. Finally, becoming weary of so much conflicting law, he tore up all the decisions and made the law to suit the case as follows:

1—The land department has the right to determine equitable as well as legal rights of parties claiming interests in public lands. 2—That no rights are acquired under the settlement laws by an unlawful trespass on the undisputed and known possessions of another, who believes his title to be good. 3—That no right of preemption can be established by a settlement and improvement on public lands where the claimant has obtained possession by breaking into the enclosure of one who has already settled upon, improved and enclosed the same; such an intrusion, although made under pretext of preempting the land, is but a naked, unlawful trespass and cannot initiate a right of preemption. 4—That as between one holding a preemption entry, where by mistake the patent failed to describe the land actually purchased, and another claiming under a subsequent location of such land, made with knowledge of the facts of the prior purchase, the superior equity is with the former and patent should issue to correct the mistake.

Register Sanford recommended the cancellation of Wiss' entry and that Bahn be given an opportunity to perfect legal title to the lands which had in reality been his for 30 years. The decision will be received with great interest in and around Willits where similar contests have been instituted. Sanford's judge-made law has been affirmed by the Commissioner and will be hailed with delight by all honest homesteaders.

CLAUDE VAN DYKE TAKES LEASE ON FINE PROPERTY

Claude Van Dyke, of this city, has leased the Meyers pear orchard near Hopland. This is the famous orchard of less than four acres which netted its owner a thousand dollars an acre for several years. It is a peculiarly heavy bearing stock and grafts from it are much valued among the pear growers of this section. Van Dyke has taken possession.

bottle of disinfectant, in this kit. The sponge or swab of cotton cloth can be tied to a stout string about arm's length and fastened to a button hole or the operator's clothing.

Caution—Corrosive sublimate is a deadly poison. The tablets and the bottle of disinfectant should be so labeled plainly and should be kept away from children and other persons, and the bottle of solution, when not in use, being very inexpensive, should be emptied.

Corrosive sublimate is a powerful germicide, but does not penetrate deeply. It does not kill the cut edges of the bark. Other disinfectants can be used. A tablespoonful of ordinary bleaching powder or chloride of lime placed in a gallon of water is effective. A two per cent bluestone solution is also effective. Ordinary forty per cent formaldehyde solution at the strength of one ounce to the gallon is likewise a good germicide. These solutions should always be kept in glass bottles or otherwise chemically clean containers. They should never be put in tin cans or metal containers of any sort, since the solutions are decomposed and rendered inert by metals. The water used should be reasonably clean and the sponge or swab should be kept clean by occasional washing.

Hints for Effective Work

Begin operations at the base of the tree and work upward, otherwise a lot of time and careful work may be wasted on the upper part of a branch which it is later found necessary to remove, or body blight or even collar blight found later on the tree may cause it to be condemned. In some cases there is a limit to the amount of work which the grower is willing to do to save a tree. The blight should be removed even if it necessitates condemning the tree and rooting it out. A tree partly injured by collar blight may be cleaned up and saved. This often requires digging the dirt away and working partly underground. It is necessary, however, to follow the margin of the disease, even if it carries you into the ground, just as if you were tracing the boundaries of an island. It is usually best to condemn a tree girdled by collar blight. It is possible, however, after doing thorough work of eradication with a rather mild case of collar blight, to bridge graft and thus save the tree by the same process used in bridge grafting a tree girdled by mice or other animals.

Collar blight can best be detected in the autumn, just before the pear or apple trees shed their leaves. This and similar injuries to the collar of a tree will cause the leaves to yellow and assume bronze or autumn colors and even drop, while those on the normal, healthy tree are still green. Other troubles, such as injuries by mice, frost collar girdle, and fungous root rot causes similar symptoms, but these symptoms should lead to an inspection of the collar.

To inspect the collar of a tree or any doubtful point on the body or on large limbs, dig out with a carpenter's gouge or a sharp knife a small piece of the outer bark, exposing an area of the fleshy bark the size of one's thumb nail. The cut should not be made through to the cambium and will do no injury if the bark is all right at that point. Always do this with a disinfectant in hand and promptly disinfect the cut, otherwise you may inoculate the blight or at least give an opportunity for inoculation. Keep the knife or gouge continually disinfected during this inspection.

Do not be deceived by the normal rough bark formation, which consists of the outer layers of bark which have died naturally. Fruit trees, like other trees, keep their bark smooth while young and vigorous. As they get older the outer layers begin to die, being replaced by vigorous young bark underneath. This process starts mainly at the base of the tree and works upward, the oldest bark dying first. It also begins in spots on the branches, especially at the bases of fruit spurs or small twigs, and finally covers all the older branches of the tree. It is natural to the tree and needs no attention except to distinguish it from the true blighted areas.

In working out bad cases of blight, particularly on the collars, bodies, or larger branches where there is considerable live blight in the thick, fleshy bark, it is a good plan, after doing the work thoroughly, to mark such a case by tying a strip of cotton cloth around the body or branch to distinguish it from the non-virulent cases, then three or four days to a week later with a gouge or sharp knife retrim the margins to make sure that you worked beyond the blight at all points. The bark will discolor naturally, so that this blight can not be detected without retrimming. If any of the blight were left it is thus given an opportunity to discolor further the bark and show itself. This works better in warm weather than in cold weather.

Having cleaned up the blight thoroughly in the fall, when dealing with bad outbreaks it is a good plan to go over the orchard tree by tree and inspect in early spring when the buds are swelling, but well ahead of the blossoming period, to make sure that no cases escaped. A bit of gummy exudate will, of course, immediately lead to examination with a knife and gouge. Carry the kit of tools and disinfect and be prepared for further work on such cases. Occasionally a suspicious-looking case may be partially or completely retrimmed, as above suggested.
